How the reading of it affected ONE YOUNG LADY.

MARYSVILLE, MO., July 22, 1881.

Author of “BASHFUL MAN.”

Dear Friend--Having read your story of the “BASHFUL MAN,” and seeing the invitation at the close of the same, and after studying the matter over for a short time, came to the conclusion that I was the very girl for you; myself being of good family and an expert in cooking and everything pertaining to house-work. I am not an old maid or anything of that sort, but am just in the prime of life--my next birthday will be nineteen; I am of medium height, and, if I do say it myself, good looking. Now, wanting to get a good husband, and thinking you would suit me, I am at your service. If you think I will do, just drop me a few lines, and I will then tell further what I can do. Till then

I remain, sincerely yours,

P.S.—Please write any way.—ANNA.
